STERILITY THREAT

Within a few weeks you will encounter the most prevalent gripe of Easterners in matters outside of the classroom: Eastern is a drag on the weekends, even worse than on the week night.

This cry emits from the majority of commuters who rarely venture from their Spokane strongholds after their last class of the day the misguided hombres and hombreses known as Weekenders and the few dissidents who are uptight in thinking that anything of commonality isn't worth the sweat off their brow.

Please do not be misguided by these outbursts of somewhat unwarranted snivelings. It is true that the week nights at Eastern aren't filled with school-sponsored ribaldry—it's all off campus. Even so, those who bother to read the Focus, rather than use it for scratch paper, will find that three or four nights a week do have activities, some appealing to all.

The core of disgruntlement arises from the lack of high caliber entertainment on the weekends.

There is some basis for this, especially if one is concerned with only the neat-jet mixer Friday and Saturday. But there are very entertaining acts booked each quarter along with dances featuring well-known bands. The problem arises when students fail to learn of such events through lack of advertisement or lack of interest.

The hang up is the existence of a vicious circle with the weekenders and commuters making it to Spokane because more activity is there, and the off-campus people having their own form of entertainment. As a result there is low attendance at the programs which are sponsored, which results in a lack of profit (thus initiative) for the sponsors. The programs become fewer and lower in quality; soon even fewer attend.

Perhaps if you, the thousand Freshmen, young, uninhibited, and adventuresome, would break the circle and kick in three hours of time in attendance for a few weekends, these sponsors would get with it and reply with something out of sight.

Let's make Eastern where it's at before sterility sets in.

ROD GALE,

Orientation Secretary

AN EDITOR'S VIEW

College Way: Ideas, Ideals

By WILLIAM R. MORLIN
Easterner Editor

Colleges and universities undoubtedly are among the most common terminals where an individual can meet ideas and ideals even though at first glance many such institutions seem to be social centers operating under the pretense of "academic need" and swirling apart from reality.

Ideas and ideals offered at college are multi-varied and range from the simple and orthodox to the complex and the unorthodox. They are available not only in the classroom and the textbook, but in conversation and inward thought.

The conglomeration of students attending an institution of higher learning is by itself quite awesome. Therefore, it is understandable why the range of ideas and ideals is so wide.

Even though college is something different for each individual, it is quite unlikely any student will escape from a term of studies without being brushed and perhaps even etched with ideas and ideals.

A gander at the scene:

—For the entering freshman coed, the atmosphere here at college will be a pleasant change from 4-H activities, the Girl Scout group or the high school chorus.

—For the middle-aged housewife returning or coming to college for the first time, higher education could be a mentally exciting experience.

—For the ex-serviceman, college might well offer a mild switch from rigorous order and other processes which generally seem to hinder normal intellectual growth.

Whatever for whomever, college is solely because of the ideas and ideals. These intangibles transfer mental, social or spiritual philosophies and they are one of few common denominators which exist between students.

To learn there are many ideas and ideals while acknowledging those of others is a high-set goal.

Ideas and ideals can be found in places ranging from the drama department to the student union building's pool room; from a sociology lecture to a weight training class; from hippie demonstrations to the ROTC department and from the athletic field to student government.

There is an area for every student... every student who has the initiative to search.

It at times becomes a lonely hunt.

For at college, an individual must stand alone, search for and meet ideas and ideals and decide.

And this is the college way.

COVER PHOTO

Easterner photographer and Orientation Chairman Joe Oakley captured the setting of several new buildings on the Eastern campus. Looking north from the roof of the new Martin Addition are the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library and the Hall of Science. The cylindrical buildings are Dressler Hall, a women's dorm, and Pearce Hall for men. In the foreground of Pearce is the Music Building, soon to be replaced by a five building Fine Arts complex to be located behind the library.

College Offers Range Of Challenges

By MIKE MURPHY

Associated Students President

In the span of your lifetime, you will probably hear the words "To Be" more than once and the atmosphere of college will offer many challenges to those words.

At Eastern the opportunity "to be" becomes a distinct reality, if you, as a student possess the ability, creativity, patience, and tenacity. The field may range in scope from athletic to fraternal, academic to social; each area is yours for the taking.

Eastern is the battleground where you will face others and yourself and learn the art of being. The greatest obstacle in the struggle "to be" lies in the conquest of one's own self. To be what you desire requires a knowledge of what you would "like" to do, and you "must" do.

You, as a student, will in all probability be on your own in facing this challenge. The comfort and security of home are left behind in favor of the new freedoms of campus life. These freedoms are often new and unknown greats of power, yours to be dealt with as you see fit.

The mores of the college are adult even though the majority of the students are not. You will be expected to act by the mores even though you are not yet endowed with all the rights and privileges legally acquired upon reaching adult status. These unwritten rules are very important and they are the most devious of problems that must be faced. They are contingent on one point, you, the student.

MIKE MURPHY

As an individual, it is up to you to fit the structure to your own personality and needs. You can use the structure in any way in your drive "to be".

Individuality has never been at such a critical shortage; real individuals, not impressionists, are needed to make the system work. The opportunity is there, try it.

You are members of Associated Students of Eastern Washington State College and you have a share in the operation and future of the Associated Students. Its a "being" organization and if you want "to be" give us a try.

Commo Need Exists Again

By GARY RENTEL
AS Executive Vice President

This year, with an ever increasing student body, a greater need will exist for communication both on the student and faculty level.

In the coming few weeks, the Associated Students hope to revise and strengthen the AS Committee system which is so vitally needed to provide this form of communication.

At this moment, many openings exist for interested students on both student and faculty committees.

One example is the AS Constitution Committee. It is through this committee that any club or organization eventually receives recognition on Eastern's campus. A club's constitution must be approved by this committee before it can be submitted to the AS Council for final approval. Four openings now exist on this committee for interested as well as qualified students.

In order to make the faculty increasingly aware of the students' objectives and desires, it's also vital that student openings be filled on several faculty committees.

We feel unique at our school in the fact that we, unlike many other institutions, give our students both full voting and speaking powers on faculty committees.

An example of such a committee is the Student Personnel Council. This committee is vitally concerned with the rights and privileges of each college student. Two positions are open on this committee for those who wish to accept the challenge.

The Associated Students invite you, therefore to pay a visit to the AS Offices for more information concerning AS Committees.

To preserve the lifeline of student communications—we need your help and cooperation. It is only up to you to offer it.

Orientation Week Activities Underway On Campus

THE FRESHMEN TALENT SHOW is presented to the student body the last night of Orientation Week. It is a variety show staffed, produced and participated in by the entering freshmen.

Campus Employment Applications Ready

By GENE GINTHER
Contributing Writer

Students interested in part-time campus employment should file an application in the Personnel Office soon, says Ivan Zarling, director of non-academic personnel.

The Personnel Office is located on the first floor of Showalter. Students granted college work study for the coming year should report to the office of Financial Aid, Showalter 104.

Part-time student employees are allowed to work up to 20 hours per week if carrying a normal course load, 15 hours if working under the work-study program and 30 hours if a part-time student (carrying less than six hours).

First quarter Freshmen with a 1.75 G.P.A. or above will be given one quarter in which to raise their current quarterly grade point to 2.00, says Zarling. All other students employed must maintain a 2.00 G.P.A.

Part-time workers, explains Zarling, are paid at either the H-1 or H-2 pay increment with the decision as to the pay rate being set by the Personnel Office. H-2 pay is set by the Personnel Office. H-1 beginning hourly wage is $1.31 and H-2 is $1.45.

Work paid under the H-1 bracket consists of: student janitorial help, closely supervised food service help, office help when machine speed and accuracy need not equal those of classified positions and closely supervised watering and other grounds work.

H-2 increment wages are paid to students performing tasks requiring the proficiency level of regular college employees. These tasks include standby employee replacement, stenographers, gardeners, trade helpers and other higher rated personnel, said Zarling.

Raises within their pay increment are available to students after they have accumulated 160 hours in the same department, says Zarling. Students, however, guaranteed a raise. To receive a raise the student must be recommended by the department head and the request must then be approved by the Personnel Office.

All students interested in work should file his applications with the Personnel Office as the office is sometimes able to place students in off-campus jobs but must have an application on file so the student can be considered, concludes Zarling.

- Evening Activities*

By ROD GALE
Orientation Secretary

This year's Orientation program has seen a great amount of revision from previous years. For the first time in six years there is a new handbook, The Pathfinder, which has been completely rewritten and updated.

Activities for new freshmen have been redesigned to enable as many students as possible to attend, especially commuters. Once in attendance, students will find improved activities of more value and providing more interest.

Activities will cover an entire week beginning today with Orientation registration and winding up with the Freshman Talent Show, Friday evening.

Today and Monday will be the busiest: arrival of the Freshmen with their parents and family, registration ($2 for admittance to all activities and $4 for four meals and a banquet), general meetings for students and parents, and an afternoon reception with President Shuck and members of the faculty, climaxed with a barbecue dinner in Tawanka Commons.

Monday students will meet in their orientation groups throughout the day to discuss and ask questions concerning college policies and procedures.

A Freshmen class meeting will be held at which President Shuck, various members of the faculty and student government leaders will speak. The evening meal will be a banquet at Tawanka, served by the Orientation Guides.

There will be movies Sunday and Tuesday; mixers Monday and Wednesday, featuring the County Fair and the Rotation. Frosh buttons distributed at registration will admit holders to all such activities at no cost.

Football Team, Fans Ready For Grid Season

Savage Spirits have been steadily on the increase as athletic prowess has blossomed. A larger turnout is hoped for now home games are played on campus.

By JOE WILLIAMS
Contributing Writer

One of the biggest symbols at Eastern is the football team and its winning program. Eastern's teams have won the Evergreen conference title three times in the last three years.

Last year the team went even further by playing in the NAIA small college championship at Morgantown, W.Va., and placing second.

Returning from last year's team this fall are 11 lettermen including small college All-American End Dave Svendsen and his passing teammate, small college All-American Bill Diedrick. This fall's squad is lead by a new coach Brent Wooten, a former assistant coach here for the past five years. Wooten hopes to give the fans "just as much excitement and more than in the past with the passing and running combination of the Savages."

Another ingredient that adds to the new season's program is Woodward Field, a new football stadium in its second year. Eastern's gridiron is surrounded by a new rubber asphalt track that has never felt the hands of a defeat in varsity competition.

In this year's pigskin preview, the forecast doesn't look as though the Savages will face a defeat.

Falling back on last year's undefeated season (10-0) and leaning forward to this year's undefeated season, Eastern football fans can look for an exciting and rewarding football season.

At the start of every school year, ardent sport fans look forward to the new football season. This coming year Eastern can go one further in that aspect in looking forward to the debut of a new football coach, Brent Wooten.

Wooten is a 1961 graduate of University of Washington where he played football for four years. He also played in two Rose Bowl games as a half back for the Huskies in 1960 and 1961. Following his graduation, Wooten went to Columbia Basin Junior College for two years as head football coach.

In 1963, Wooten joined the football coaching staff here at Eastern under the direction of Dave Holmes and for the past five years, he has been assistant football coach and varsity wrestling coach. This year he has traded these two positions for head football coach and Athletic Director for the Savages.

BOOK SALE

Intercollegiate Knights and Spurs, two of Eastern's honorary service organizations, are sponsoring a booksale Sept. 23-30 in the Capri Room of the student Union Building.

Students bring in textbooks to be sold which will be used this quarter. The seller is permitted to set his own price. Books for most lower division and a few upper division classes are available.

This enables the students to buy most of the books they need at prices well below those of new books.

A very low handling fee is charged for each book sold but those not sold are returned to the seller at no cost.

The IK-Spur Booksale acts as a valuable and easy way for students to dispose of unwanted books and to purchase those which are needed.

NEW HEAD COACH BRENT WOOTEN and small college All-American end Dave Svendsen confer in the new Woodward stadium on strategy for the upcoming season. Wooten will take over control of a team which finished second in last year's NAIA national championships.

Eastern's "Greek" System Expanding

By JERRY SHACKETTE
Contributing Writer

Fraternities and sororities at Eastern have come a long way since they began on the campus. Fraternities that were local and some that were in the dorms are now in their own houses and have national affiliation. The members of these groups have become the most active group on the campus, all within a space of very few years.

Pi Kappa Alpha, Lambda Chi Alpha and Sigma Nu are represented nationally on the campus. One other fraternity, Theta Chi Upsilon, has just been organized and is a local. All the fraternities have living, eating, and study space in their houses and all are looking forward to the day in the not too distant future when they will be able to build and offer additional services to their members.

Two sororities have chapters at Eastern. Alpha Xi Delta, and Chi Omega have very active groups. The sororities are currently housed in the dorms with members of the sorority living together on the same floor or in the same corridor.

The normal picture that is drawn of a "Greek" is one of all fun and nothing more. Nothing could be farther from the truth. As a member or a greek organization there is time set aside for study, work, study, social activities, study, and several other activities including community service projects and responsibility in a leadership position.

The whole idea of living together and working together for a common purpose is one which all the Greeks stand for. They feel the system provides many great opportunities for its members to learn social responsibility towards their college and toward the other students, as well as society.

The Greeks at Eastern are active and aware. The majority of student body officers are Greeks and many of the most active people on the campus are Greeks. They are a group that is going places.

As you talk to people on the campus you will hear good things and probably some bad things about the fraternities and sororities. The best method is to find out for yourself what they are and what they stand for and then make up your own mind about them.

Selective Service Forms Available

Selective Service II-S request forms are available in registration packets and are to be filled out with the rest of the packet if the student requires a deferment, says Donald Manson, registrar.

Anyone not having a II-S application should check with the Registrar's Office.

Manson says the deferment requests are turned in to the appropriate draft boards after the beginning of the Fall quarter. His office is sure the student is in attendance. Students turning 18 after the start of school may register for the draft in the office of the Dean of Students.

Students needing to send a copy of their transcript to their board will have to do it themselves, says Manson. Transcript copies are available free to students on personal request.

Though no report of discontinuance is filed with the respective draft board should the board request a report on the student his withdrawal will be reported, says Manson.

Koinonia House Open On Campus

By TERRY DAVIS
Contributing Writer

Where it's at as far as the informal interchange of ideas and plain ole simple-minded give-and-take goes is Campus Christian Fellowship's Koinonia House. The name is Greek for "spiritual fellowship," or something like that.

The Campus Christian Fellowship is the campus ministry supported by six co-operating Protestant denominations - American Baptist, Disciples of Christ, Episcopal, Methodist, Presbyterian, and United Church of Christ.

These six denominations pay most of the bills. Students do not, however, have to be a member of one of them to participate in the program or use Koinonia House.

The Koinonia house is a white frame structure from Louise Anderson Hall. Even though it looks like a private dwelling, it is available for your use twenty-four hours a day for studying, relaxing, and conversation.

Koinonia House offers a fairly quiet place to study, and interesting people to talk to. The K-House has catalogued library of religious and other books, magazines, a stereo phonograph, piano, games, and coffee.

Since the purpose of the Koinonia organization is conceived as a ministry to the whole campus, including faculty and staff as well as students, the Campus Christian Fellowship is very loosely organized, and no membership lists are kept. Anyone who participates in any way is considered a member.

There is no party line at Koinonia House, and every participant is free to believe and think as he pleases. Campus Christian Fellowship believes in the open interchange of ideas, confident in the ability of truth to stand on its own feet and survive according to the principle of the survival of the fittest.

THE PAPERBACK JUNGLE

By BILL STIMSON
Feature Writer

Now, here is a list of things you should have forgotten. Check them off one by one.

1. If I do not study like a monk the world will come to an end. This is patently untrue. If you do not study you may fall into disgrace at home, obtain ulcers, flunk out of school and go to work full time in a hamburger joint. But the world will not come to an end.

2. College girls are sexier than other girls. Again, completely untrue. Being interested in sex is only a stage all girls go through while in high school. They are through it (and with it) by the time they have gone to about three high school graduation parties.

But perhaps this is a good time to examine your motives for going to college at all. Many boys go to college because they heard sex is rife on campus. Sex (or life, as its called on campus) is like Dean Rusk on campus - a popular topic of conversation, but hardly welcome.

More things to forget:

3. Football and basketball stars always date beautiful girls, get a C-minus instead of an F, call teachers by their first names, are 4-F because they have bad knees, and never have to pay for beer in taverns. Many people in the outside world hold this view of college athletes, which is okay because it is perfectly true. But forget it anyway or it will torment you. You are, after all, hardly the athletic type.

4. College professors are quaint and delphic - invariably having lots of grey hair and grey matter. No. This stereotype is true for only a fraction of all college teachers. The only thing most college teachers do have in common is the fact that they don't like being college teachers. But they realize that teaching is the only sterile-glass way of dealing with what are in reality dirty problems. So bravely they stand at their urns and splash away at the world's problems with rhetoric like spinsters teaching child care.

5. I am among an elite group that has been chosen to go on to bigger and better things because I will get a college education. Ho ho. In actuality, college often as not serves only to keep incompetents out of the factories. And a good electrician makes more money than any junior executive in the country. A bachelors degree can get you such challenging jobs as managing the linens department at J.C. Penney's or pushing life insurance.

As soon as you have forgotten all the things I listed above, you can start remembering a few of THE RULES. These are not all THE RULES, but are enough to get you started on your way to success in college.

1. Do not wear your high school letter sweater to college.
2. Do not bring your high school girl friend to college.
3. Always read Bill Stimson's column.
4. Do not take Keith Tracy's classes.
5. Be good looking.
6. Read the 1954 Geneva Accords.
7. Always read Bill Stimson's column.
8. If you cannot get into Keith Tracy's class, do not take Mr. Waddington's class instead.
9. Do not believe everything you read.
10. Except when you read Bill Stimson's column.

Note: Memorize these rules quickly. This column will self-destruct in ten seconds.

Poof.

Leadership Retreat In Planning Stages

By ART BUDKE
Leadership Retreat Co-Chairman

Leadership Retreat should prove to be the most dynamic in its history this year since planning has continued throughout the summer quarter for this annual event, to be held at Priest Lake, Idaho. Chairmen Art Budke and Dave Iverson say leadership retreat "formulates policies of student government for the school year and offers an invaluable way for students and selected faculty members to select the paths for directing student government and acquainting students with the AS."

Sensitivity Training, says Budke, seems to be the trend now with large corporations and small organizations taking advantage of the benefits to be gained from these sessions. As an outgrowth of the National Student Government convention in San Francisco last year, Budke and Iverson say they hope to utilize some aspects of the sensitivity training program.

Professional discussion leaders are being contacted, and organizers hope that these sessions will set the mood for leadership retreat and for the school year.

Leadership retreat is open to all Eastern students with a cum G.P.A. of 2.00 or better. Freshmen and new students are encouraged to apply if they are interested in student government. According to Iverson there will be approximately 80 students selected for the retreat and about ten to 15 faculty members will be invited.

All expenses are paid by the Associated Students. Transportation, lodging and meals are budgeted for the annual event.

Selection will be made on the basis of continued interest in the AS, past participation, and potential benefit to the Associated Student government, says Budke.

"We are especially interested in new students at Eastern who have a future in the Associated Student Government-students whose interest is keen and who are willing to put out the extra time and patience in order to receive the many benefits which student government participation gives," he said.

AS Photo I.D. Cards Available Tuesday

All Freshmen and transfer students will need to have their pictures taken for student I.D. cards within the first three to four days of the Fall quarter, says Walt Zabel, student activities coordinator.

I.D. card pictures will be taken all day starting Tuesday, Sept. 24, and continue through next Wednesday. School dress should be worn for the pictures.

Under Eastern's new Associated Student Body Card policy, inaugurated last year, all students will be required to show both the picture I.D. and their quarterly validation card to be admitted free to school activities. First activity requiring the picture card will be the football game with Western Washington State College next Saturday.

"Picture I.D.'s taken when the student enters school will be good for the four or more years the student attends Eastern," says Zabel.

Quarterly validation stubs will be color coded with different colors for each quarter.

Campus Action The Year Around

STUDENT ACTIVITIES tend to vary from the formal to informal, participation to spectating. Opportunities abound for involvement in all areas of interest.

PLAYS are presented several times a quarter and vary from one to three acts, Shakespeare to O'Neal, comedy to drama. All plays are student staffed.

NAME ENTERTAINMENT has been increasing in number and quality and promises to do so at an even faster rate. Many acts are presented at no charge to students.

THE HOMECOMING PARADE, rain or shine, is held to kick off the Homecoming Day activities. A telephoto lens is used to show a small part of the procession which is headed by the ROTC Drill team and followed by the Savage band.
